Alumni Legislators

Ohio University graduates fared well in the November elections, with one alumnus, Don J. Pease '53 MA '55, elected to the U.S. House of Representatives from the 13th Ohio Congressional District, and all six men who had been serving in the Ohio Legislature reelected.

Pease, a Democrat, had been a senator in the last General Assembly and before that had served three terms in the Ohio House of Representatives. The freshman Congressman will be on the International Relations Committee.

The International Relations Committee oversees trade policies, such as export regulations and agreements, questions of foreign investment in the U.S. and U.S. investment abroad, and all commodity agreements between the U.S. and other nations. It also oversees international boundary disputes.

Asked for his reactions to being a freshman Congressman, Pease replied: "Based on my first few weeks' experience, I'm generally impressed with the high caliber and seriousness of intent of my colleagues, and I'm looking forward to working with them. I think this will be a productive session of Congress."

The 1952 editor of the OU Post, Pease is also a former editor of the Oberlin News-Tribune.

Other men who attended OU who were returned to the General Assembly were Speaker of the House Vernal G. Riffe, Democrat, 89th District; Claire M. Ball, Jr. '63, MBA '64, Republican, 91st District; James E. Betts '54, Republican, 3rd District; Oakley C. Collins '35, Republican, 17th District; Paul R. Leonard '65, Democrat, 37th District; and Kenneth A. Rocco, '62, Democrat, 7th District.

Riffe, president of a New Boston insurance agency, has served the 89th District since 1959. In 1974, the State House Press Corps voted him the Outstanding Legislator in Ohio, and last fall his leadership in bringing the College of Osteopathic Medicine to campus was recognized when he was among the first recipients to be awarded the Phillips Medal of Public Service by the University.

Ball, now serving his third term, is on the Finance Appropriations Committee and the Insurance, Utilities and Financial Institutions Committee. A partner in the Athens law firm of Jones and Ball, he served as prosecuting attorney of Athens County for four years.

Betts, elected to his second term, was recently admitted to the Ohio Bar, and has entered private practice with the firm of Walter, Haverfield, Buescher and Chockley in Cleveland. He is serving on the Education, Economic Affairs and Federal Relations and Judiciary committees.

Collins is in his 21st year in the Senate and has also served four years in the House. The Ironton resident is serving on the Education and Health, Highways and Transportation, and Local Government and Urban Affairs committees.

Leonard is serving his third term in the House. A member of the law firm of Horn, Rife and Leonard in Kettering, he is also an adjunct assistant professor at Wright State University. He is on the Judicial, Interstate Cooperation, and Insurance, Financial Institutions and Public Utilities committees.

Rocco was elected to his first full term, having been appointed in 1975 to a seat left vacant in the House. An attorney, the Parma resident is a member of the Governmental Affairs, Judiciary, and Reference committees.

On the Cover

A montage of front pages of the student newspaper through the years reflects its evolution from the Green and White to the Ohio University Post, a publication recently described — and where else but in its own pages — by President Ping as both a joy and the bane of his existence.

In This Issue

The center spread (pages 8 and 9) is devoted to an article by Susan Crites Frampton '72, MA '73, outlining the 66-year history of the campus newspaper and including the views of current Post editor Dan Sewell.

Ms. Frampton's interest in the topic is readily understood: as an undergraduate journalism major she worked on the Post, beginning as a reporter and working up to associate editor.

Other stories feature a unique OU family, the Whitacres (p. 7), an alumni dance concert to honor Shirley Wimmer, director of the School of Dance, and raise funds for dance scholarships (p. 5), and research by Mordecai Jaffee, professor of botany (p. 3).

THE OHIO UNIVERSITY ALUMNI JOURNAL is published by the Ohio University Development/Alumni Office, Jack G. Ellis, '57, Director of Development; Keith Welsh, '60, Director of Alumni Relations. Produced by the Office of Public Information. Sent six times a year to alumni contributing $10 or more annually, to members of the Trustees Academy, and to graduates for one year following graduation. Two four-page issues—January-February and September-October—sent to all non-donor alumni. BOARD OF DIRECTORS of the Ohio University Alumni Association: Arthur E. Aspengren, '55, MA '56, President; John M. Jones, '49, Vice President; James T. Shipman, '51; Secretary: Wilfred R. Konneker, '43, Ex-officio; Keith Welsh, '60, Director of Alumni Relations; Robert P. Axline, Jr., '57; James E. Betts, '54; Deborah Phillips Bower, '73; Richard H. Brown, '65; Mrs. Kent J. Chapman, '49; Donald M. Compton, '44; B. T. Grover, Jr., '50; M. F. Line, Jr., '62; Thomas M. McKee, '73; Earle W. Phillips, Jr., '49; Sanford Slavin, '47; L. Dale Springer, '48; William Steinhardt, '50; Arthur W. Steller, '69, MA '70, PhD '73; Lawrence R. Tsvacir, '58.

Research in Botany

Research underway in Ohio University's botanical laboratories has recently attracted the attention of such divergent agencies as the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the British Broadcasting Corp.

Dr. Mordecai Jaffe, associate professor of botany, is one of about 20 experimental plant scientists from throughout the nation asked by NASA to consult on the use of vegetation on outer space flights.

His work dealing with the chemical reactions of plants to ecological conditions is the subject of a film segment made by BBC for its science series "Horizons."

Jaffe's research for NASA will contribute to the basic goal of better utilizing plants on long space flights.

"Man needs water and food, oxygen and a way to get rid of waste," Jaffe points out. "Ideally, plants can do these things for us."

"On a long flight, say to Mars, it would be desirable to use plants instead of storing water and supplies on board," he says. Human waste, for instance, could be used to fertilize plants, which in turn can be used as food or as oxygen producers.

"That's an ideal situation, of course," Jaffe cautions, "but it's one area of research to study." Other areas will concern the effects of zero gravity, vibration, lack of an atmosphere and mechanical stimulation on plant growth.

Such research will eventually involve scientists in space shuttles and in experiments in orbiting space stations, a prospect that is exciting to Jaffe. Moreover, he notes that scientists—not "politicians or engineers"—will judge which areas of research to include in future NASA work.

Jaffe's specialty is mechanical stimulation—studying the effects of air currents, noise, touch and other variables on plant growth. During his 10 years researching stimulation effects, first at Yale and then at OU, Jaffe has found touching slows growth in "virtually all plants."

It is this segment of Jaffe's work that was of interest to BBC for a program dealing with the frontiers of research in botany.

Filming done in Jaffe's laboratory will demonstrate the reaction of plants to touch. Specific "experiments" filmed include the reactive movement to touch of the stamen of the portulaca flower and the measurable growth of a bean plant during a 20-second period.

Another experiment showed the coiling response of the tendrils of pea plants. A tendril is loaded with radioactive water and touched. After it coils, it is sliced and the halves measured for radioactivity. Water from the underside of the coiled portion is shown to have drained back through the stem.

The capacity for electrical conductivity in plants is illustrated in an experiment with a fan, simulating wind, blowing a tendril.

Dr. Jaffe has conducted research since 1967 under continuous grants from the National Science Foundation.

A BBC crew prepares for close-up filming of effects of mechanical stimulation on plants, part of the research of OU botanist Mordecai Jaffe (in lab coat).

At A Glance

Fusion Energy Research

OU Distinguished Professor of Physics Raymond Lane is one of nine scientists now serving on the Advisory Committee for the National Neutron Cross Section Center at Brookhaven National Laboratory, the collection point for all types of nuclear data.

Experiments now being conducted by Lane on campus are contributing to the early stages of fusion energy research. Fusion energy is being looked at as a possible replacement for fission energy, which requires uranium. Fusion energy could use sea water as fuel and produce little radioactive waste.

Lane is also responsible for the University's being chosen as one of five laboratories to participate in a joint research project that has application to the nation's current fusion energy studies. The group reports to and is funded by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration.

Greek Life Award

Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and Beta Theta Pi fraternity received the Ohio University Greek Life Awards for fall quarter.

The awards, given for the first time, are sponsored by the University's Greek Life Committee. Winners are selected on the basis of community service, spirit, and contribution to the Greek system.

Nancy Riegel Matthews '57 is the adviser for Alpha Gam, and Lawrence Worstell '25 is the adviser for the Betas.

Study Abroad

Three former University students recommended by the campus Fulbright Program Committee are studying this year on grants received through the Division of Study Abroad Program of the Institute of International Education.

Richard M. Bernstein, who did graduate work in glassblowing at OU, is now studying creative glass design in England under a fellowship from the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Stephen A. Hedges, a 1974 graduate in music, is continuing his studies in Germany under a German Academic Exchange Service award; and Phillip B. Zarrilli, a 1969 graduate in philosophy, is studying in India under a Fulbright-Hays full grant.

McGuffey and OU

A collection of printing plates for the historic McGuffey Readers has been presented to the University by Van Nostrand Reinhold Publishers.

The gift recognized old and current ties between the University and the editor of the Readers, William Holmes McGuffey, OU's president from 1839 to 1842. McGuffey Hall was completed during his tenure and remains one of the three historic buildings on the main green, and elms McGuffey planted were campus landmarks for more than 100 years.

The more recent tie is with Dr. Stanley Lindberg of the English Department, whose book The Annotated McGuffey was published in 1976 by Van Nostrand Reinhold. In the book, Lindberg annotated 160 of the McGuffey lessons, relating them to periods of American culture and history.

Cooperative Venture

Sociology and geology students joined forces fall quarter to complete an environmental impact review required for a local road project in Athens County.

Working under the supervision of Girard Krebs, associate professor of sociology, and Moid U. Ahmad, professor of geology, the students assessed the impact of the proposed $100,000 project on the people to be affected and the physical and biological environment to be disturbed.

The interdisciplinary venture was funded by a $3,000 contract from the county commissioners, with the money going to the student staff members.

WICI Reunion

A reunion of OU alumnae of Women in Communications, Inc. (WICI), formerly Theta Sigma Phi, will be held during the Region 2 meeting of WICI at Ohio University April 2-3.

The regional conference will also feature guest appearances by several prominent women in journalism.

Highlighting the list is Helen Thomas, White House bureau chief of UPI, who will be presented the Carr Van Anda Award.

The conference has rates for both members and nonmembers. Further information can be obtained from WICI, Lasher Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701.

Coblentz Award Winner

Next month, Dr. Peter R. Griffiths, associate professor of chemistry, will be presented the Coblentz Award as 1977's outstanding molecular spectroscopist under the age of 36. He will receive the honor at the Pittsburgh Conference on Analytical Chemistry and Applied Spectroscopy, the largest meeting of the year for analytical chemists.

The British-born Griffiths, a graduate of Oxford University, has received several grants for his research in spectroscopy and has written a book on the subject.

Spectroscopy is the study of how molecules absorb or emit infrared radiation at different wave lengths due to the way in which their component atoms vibrate.

Treasurer Kennard

William Kennard '54, who was named treasurer of the University in August, is now serving as treasurer of the Ohio University Fund, Inc., as well.

He had previously served as University controller since 1968 and was also with the U.S. Steel Co. for nine years.

The Best Gift

Bill Cratty at rehearsal.

Cathy Paine at rehearsal.

This concert is a celebration of almost a decade of generosity that we want, in our dancing, to return. Shirley Wimmer's vision makes Ohio University a unique place for dancing and dancers, teachers and students. Our dance roots are here, strong supports for the many directions in which we continue to grow.

—Program Introduction, Alumni Dance Concert, December 5, 1976.

In responding to the tribute from her former students, Miss Wimmer, now in her tenth year as director of the School of Dance, said simply that "it was the best gift a teacher could receive."

Miss Wimmer was at UCLA when she was asked to create a department "from scratch" at Ohio University. She accepted the challenge, welcoming a place which did not emphasize bigness, agreed to a program with about 50 majors and promoted co-operation among the fine arts.

The idea for an alumni concert in Miss Wimmer's honor had been talked about for several years, according to Diane Frank '70, now dancing with the Douglas Dunn Co. while on leave from the University of Maryland, where she is on the dance faculty.

"Tom Riley, Bill Cratty and I were sitting around this fall in New York and decided that this was the appropriate time. We've gone different ways but we still have strong ties with Shirley Wimmer and the department. It helped us grow as dancers and as individuals. It's very special, very different from other places I've been."

During a break in an all-day Saturday rehearsal, Tom Riley '72, production director for the concert, echoed those sentiments: "You've got a rare environment here. Miss Wimmer has built an excellent faculty and set standards that attract other good faculty and guest artists. The training received is superb."

In addition to Miss Frank and Riley, dance alumni participating were Bill Cratty '73, soloist with the Jose Limon Co.; Beth Davis '75 studying at the Louis-Nikolais Theater Lab; Tom Evert '73, with the Phyllis Lamhut Co.; Kathy Kleeman '73, co-director of Somedancers, Inc.; Cathy Paine '72, director, Dance Montana; Debbie Riley '72, cofounder of Somedancers, Inc.; and John Turner '74, studying in New York.

Lighting design was by Dennis Dugan '76, a production stage manager with the Don Redlich Dance Co., and programs and posters were the work of Porter Smith Thayer '72.

The evening's proceeds went to the dance scholarship fund.

Jay Tener '78 and Tom Riley set lights in the Putnam Studio Theatre.

From the Alumni Director

This year your Alumni Association will be 124 years old. The first president, Judge A. G. Brown, was a native of Washington County, Ohio. Today's president, Art Aspengren, is from Alma, Mich. Between Judge Brown and Art Aspengren, a lot of dedicated people have assisted Ohio University through alumni programs. To mention the names would require far more space than I am allotted.

The success of the association continues to depend on such individuals. Simply stated, we need you, and you can become involved right now. Here's how:

Three vacancies will be filled at the next board meeting for terms beginning in October 1977. We are interested in men and women who want to promote the continued growth and development of the University, and self-nominations are welcomed. If you are bashful, don't be. If you know of someone who could render service, please tell us. Send suggestions to Bob Axline, Ten Cheryln Dr., Northboro, Ma. 01532.

The board, President Ping and the deans of the University are interested in reinstating the Alumni College which so many enjoyed in the mid-60s. There is strong sentiment to develop a program for this summer.

What types of learning experiences would be of interest to you? Would you like to combine an academic and recreational format? Do programs in art, literature and theater sound appealing? Your input on this subject will be given every consideration; write to me at P.O. Drawer 869, Athens, Oh. 45701.

You are an important asset of the OU Alumni Association. Your ideas, continued financial support, interest in your University and participation in alumni programs are vital.

Tax News from the Ohio University Fund, Inc.

Although the Tax Reform Act of 1976 made massive changes in all three tax areas — federal income, federal estate and federal gift — all the tax incentives for charitable gifts were retained. Several reform changes have, in effect, made planned gifts to Ohio University even more rewarding than in the past.

Following is a summary of some of the highlights of the Tax Act. It is intentionally of a general nature: for specific information, professional legal and tax counsel should be sought:

Marital Deductions Increased: The federal estate tax marital deduction in 1976 was 50 per cent of the adjusted gross estate. The new law raises the ceiling on marital deduction for estates of those dying after 1976 to the greater of $250,000 or 50 per cent of the adjusted gross estate. Therefore, the maximum marital deduction is increased for estates under $500,000.

For example, an individual with a $300,000 estate can leave the spouse $250,000 tax-free under the new law, instead of $150,000 as previously provided. Because of changes, an individual should ask his attorney to review his will, thus ensuring that his estate will obtain the benefits of the new law.

Assets Basis: Until December 31, 1976, property included in an estate was valued at its fair market value or an alternative valuation under Section 2205. Effective January 1, 1977, the basis of assets for determining gain but not loss was increased to the fair market value as of December 31, 1976. Persons should try to inventory all assets and have them valued as of December 31, 1976; changes should be reviewed by counsel.

Long-Term Capital Gains: The Reform Act changes the long-term capital gain treatment. Starting with sales made January 1, 1977, the required holding period has been changed from more than six months to more than nine months. In 1978 and subsequent years, the required holding period will be more than one year.

Capital Losses: Beginning in 1977, the limitation on the amount of capital losses which can be deducted from ordinary income is increased from $1,000 to $2,000 a year. In 1978 and subsequent years, the limitations will be $3,000.

These are but a few of the more commonly asked about changes in the tax law. In general, the act gives greater benefits and reason to consider a charitable gift during one's lifetime or to establish a charitable trust under a will.

If we can be of assistance to you in your gift planning, the Development staff would be pleased to help you achieve charitable-intent satisfaction with minimum after-tax cost.

The Whitacres

Dr. Asia Whitacre, a 1922 Ohio University alumnus, is the patriarch of a family that has produced three generations of OU graduates and currently practicing physicians.

He himself has practiced medicine in Chesterhill, Ohio, for 46 years. Following in his footsteps are his three sons — Victor '44, a general practitioner in Beverly; Wendell '51, a plastic surgeon in Tucson, Ariz.; and Gary '57, a general practitioner in Westerville. His daughter, Mary '51, is Marietta College physician; and his granddaughter, Vicki Ann '67, is a pediatrician at the Dayton Children's Center.

The three generations also share another common bond in Dr. Rush Elliott, professor emeritus of anatomy, who taught them anatomy and with whom they have maintained close ties.

Asia Whitacre was in Dr. Elliott's first class at OU and says: "We called it 'cat anatomy,' and in those days everyone in town was over at the lab looking for their cats!"

The family is quick to praise Elliott's skill as a teacher, concern for his students and ability to get OU graduates into medical schools.

Elliott returns the affection and respect. He says that it is "a rare experience for a professor to teach three generations from one family and a pleasure to see them as successful members of their profession." He notes too that the Whitacres have contributed to their communities as well as to medicine.

Even among the family members who are not doctors, Ohio University graduates are to be found:

Asia Whitacre's sister, Nina, is a 1920 alumna who taught for many years in New Jersey before retiring to Chesterhill, and his late brother, Foster '21, for over 50 years headed the mathematics department at John Marshall High School in Cleveland.

Dr. Whitacre's wife, Lena Mae Sams, is a 1921 alumna, and her husband recalls her as one of the "spring beauties," the young women teachers who came to Athens for coursework when their school term was over.

Dr. Whitacre laughs when he remembers how the men on campus awaited each new "spring beauty" crop and recalls how "Dean Voigt [Irma E. Voigt, dean of women] knew if you so much as looked up at a window in a women's dormitory," contrasting the ways of his time with today's coed living.

All three of the Whitacre sons also carried on the tradition of marrying OU graduates:

Victor's wife was the late Ruth Dougan '44, and Dr. Vicki Ann Whitacre is their daughter. A son is in pre-med at Wittenberg, another is a veterinarian, and another is in engineering at Muskingum.

Gary is married to Gayla Fuller '59, and they have two children of public school age.

Wendell married Jeanine Pierrette Pechmajor '54, who was among the first exchange students from France to come to Athens. One of their sons is in medical school at the University of Pennsylvania, another is at the Sorbonne, and twin daughters are in junior high.

Heading the other way across the Atlantic in the exchange that brought Jeanine Pechmajor to campus was Mary Whitacre.

As Marietta College's only physician, she sees "50 students a day most of the year and 100 during the cold and flu season." She is also health commissioner for Washington County and for the city of Belpre.

She and her husband, Dr. Ken Owen, an anesthesiologist, are the parents of four — a son in computer science at Marietta, another "probably going into veterinary medicine" and two daughters in public school.

Rush Elliott observes that when Vicki Ann Whitacre received her M.D. degree from Ohio State University and joined her father, her uncles, her aunt and her grandfather as a member of the medical profession, the event marked a first for OU, where all received pre-med training, and probably a first for OSU, where all earned their medical degrees.

The Ohio University Post

Susan Crites Frampton '72, MA '73

While most of the Ohio University campus sleeps, a group of students are hard at work in Pilcher House, a small building next to Baker Center. They bend over typewriters or layout tables until 2 or 3 a.m. on good nights, 7 a.m. on bad ones.

These insomniacs are members of the Post staff, carrying on a 66-year tradition of providing students, faculty, staff and townspeople with news of the University, the town, and, to some extent, the world.

Most Post readers take the paper for granted. It magically appears each weekday in classroom buildings and downtown stores, is read and tossed with little thought given to the effort involved in producing a daily newspaper with a part-time staff of amateurs, cramped facilities and an always tight budget.

Few of the Post's readers can judge its quality, either, since they don't see other campus papers. However, current editor Dan Sewell believes it not only ranks high in the nation's collegiate press, but also provides better coverage in some cases than professional newspapers.

"We probably have the best higher education coverage of all the state papers," Sewell said, noting that last year while covering state politics and higher education, he sometimes had news stories before the big city dailies.

Another indication of the standing of the Post is the jobs its writers and photographers land upon graduation (See related listing). There are former Post staffers working at some of the country's most influential newspapers and broadcast stations, and they are producing some of the top stories.

Of course the Post's place in collegiate journalism was not earned overnight. On Dec. 2, 1911, the Post started out under its original name, the Green and White, which was published under a seven-person Board of Control and which looked more like a magazine than a newspaper. Over the years the Green and White changed from a bi-weekly to a semi-weekly and its size grew from 9 inches by 11 inches to a newspaper-size tabloid.

It covered primarily campus news, especially news of groups, and sports received lots of attention. In fact the very first issue carried a story that covered the entire front page on a football game with Marietta College.

In existence only a month, the Green and White found its first issue on which to take a firm stand: an election to determine if Athens would remain a "dry" community. The paper heaped praise on the student body which, through its vote, helped keep Athens "a saloonless city."

Actually, there was little controversy reported in those early years. Editorials urging more school spirit or praising the president were common.

More recent administrations would no doubt have preferred the more supportive campus press of the early 1920s. The Green and White stated in 1922 that: "It is the purpose of the Green and White to support fully the program of the administration of the University." And in 1924 it said: "Our editorials and news columns will be ever ready to assist and forward the administration in all of its undertakings."

But like the campus, the Green and White changed rapidly. During the pre-World War II period, the paper devoted more attention to world affairs.

Then in 1939 the publication got a new format and a new name — the Post — selected by the Campus Affairs Committee from a long list of suggestions. It was thought that the publication needed a name more typical of a newspaper. The tabloid also went from a semi-weekly to being issued three times a week.

Finally in 1955 the Post became a daily four-page paper. At the same time the Campus Affairs Committee gave staff members salary increases: the editor now earned $400 yearly.

Today's Post editor makes $900 and for that amount he manages all aspects of the daily operation of a newspaper that averages eight pages.

He supervises a staff of about 50, writes editorials, acts as a liaison with the administration, meets regularly with the Post Publishing Board (an advisory group which monitors Post operations), recruits writers, speaks to campus groups, and tries to balance the Post budget. It is further assumed that he will simultaneously earn a college degree.

Dan Sewell

Why have Sewell and all other Post staffers both present and past made the kind of sacrifices required to get the Post out every day?

Partly for the experience. "The Post is very much like the real world as far as the amount of work and the deadline pressure," Sewell said. "You learn to discipline yourself.

"You also get to cover the things you want to. I'd probably have to wait five years at a city paper before I could cover politics."

At the Post Sewell got his feet wet immediately, and last year covered the Statehouse, higher education and the presidential primaries. He averaged five or six by-lined stories a week.

Since there is such a large time investment attached to Post reporting, staff social life also revolves around the paper, Sewell said. "It's like a fraternity or sorority in a way. You make friendships with people there, and you have professional things in common."

These close ties do not end with graduation either. Many fellow "Posties" stay in touch. Communication was greatly facilitated in 1974 when the Post Alumni Association was organized. It issues a newsletter and sponsors reunions in Athens each spring. All former staffers interested in joining the association may do so by writing to Box 1126, Athens 45701 and enclosing $1 for dues.

The association has also provided a speakers bureau to the journalism school and has served as a resource to current Post staffers who need professional advice.

Currently the association is working on a fund-raising project to help the Post.

The Post operates as an independent paper although it receives some financial support from the University. Sewell values this independence and believes this relationship to the University makes for a better paper.

In the past, when there has been conflict between the student paper and the University administration — an occurrence common at many universities — there has been the occasional suggestion that Ohio University might be better off with a laboratory newspaper like the Ohio State Lantern.

Like editors of the past, Sewell has a negative reaction to a laboratory paper controlled by journalism department faculty. Besides the major issue — that faculty advisers, not students, would have editorial control — Sewell said students don't have as much pride in a paper that they are working on simply as a course requirement.

On an independent paper like the Post, Sewell said, "There isn't just personal pride in getting a by-line. There's pride in the whole product."

Where Are They Now?

Many Post editors and other staffers have gone on to professional journalism jobs. A partial list of former editors-in-chief shows the following:

Susan DeFord '76, intern correspondent for the Associated Press in Cyprus;

John Kiesewetter '75, reporter, Cincinnati Enquirer;

P. J. Bednarski '74, TV columnist, Dayton Journal Herald;

Bill Choyke '72, Washington reporter for Fort Worth Star Telegram;

Rudy Maxa '71, investigative reporter at the Washington Post, author;

Andy Alexander '70, Washington correspondent, Dayton Journal Herald;

Bill Sievert '69, editor of Earth News;

Tom Price '68, political reporter, Dayton Journal Herald;

Joe Eszterhas '66, contributing editor, Rolling Stone, author;

Jim Sykes '65, reporter, Rochester Times Union;

Ted Landphair '64, manager of news and public affairs, WMAL Radio in Washington, D.C.;

Dennis Shere '63, editor, Dayton Journal Herald;

Gene Maeroff '61, education writer, New York Times;

Craig Palmer '60, staff writer, United Press International in Washington, D.C.;

Larry Tavcar '57, director of public relations, CIT Financial Corp., N.Y.

Pat Ordovensky '53, Washington correspondent, Wilmington (Del.) News-Journal;

Don Pease '52, former editor, Oberlin (Ohio) News-Tribune, member of Congress;

Paul Brickman '45, president of Creamer-Fuller, Smith & Ross, Inc. public relations firm, Chicago;

Mary Elizabeth Lasher Myers '42, (first woman to be editor of the Post) director of public relations for the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

Class Notes

1911

Wilmer E. Stine, Jacksonville, Fla., reports that he was recently visited by classmate Erwin Meredith, who resides in Ft. Myers, Fla.

1926

Dr. William W. Corwin retired from his medical practice after rendering service in Willard for 32 years. Dr. Corwin has been on the Willard Area Hospital staff and a member of the Huron County Medical Society since 1944.

1928

Jeannette Brown Woodhouse (Mrs. C. A. Woodhouse) has retired from the teaching of music in Newark, Del., schools. Mrs. Woodhouse was a member of the music faculty at OU from 1934-1937 as instructor in music theory and as cooperating teacher in music education at Putnam and The Plains schools.

1930

Bernice V. Taylor retired July 1 after 38 years of teaching, 32 of them in the Mt. Healthy city schools.

1931

Arthur W. Hendricks, long-time coach in the Clyde school system, was honored in November by being inducted into the Ohio Athletic Directors Hall of Fame at Columbus. He retired in the spring of 1966.

1932

Sports Roundup

Basketball

The early stages of the basketball season frequently left Coach Dale Bandy grimacing — the Bobcats were 5-8 at press time — but the play of forward Steve Skaggs has done nothing but bring smiles to the third-year coach's face.

The 6-foot-5 sophomore has averaged about 20 points and 10 rebounds a game, twice scoring more than 30. A year ago, he was the team's sixth man and an occasional starter, averaging 11.5 points and 3.0 rebounds per game.

"He's put on seven or eight pounds and he's an inch taller," Bandy said. "It's made a lot of difference."

Although the team had lost six of its last seven games at press time, Bandy said morale has not been a problem.

"It could be a lot worse," he said. "The character of our young men is important at times like these, and we have that good character. They're pretty solid people and they'll keep scrapping."

Wrestling

The odds on winning an eighth-straight league crown in any sport have to be slim, but wrestling Coach Harry Houska says his team might do just that.

"We're one of six teams who could win it," said Houska, whose teams have won an unprecedented seven consecutive Mid-American Conference titles.

The Bobcats return 118-pound MAC champion Andy Daniels and a trio of third-place finishers in 126-pounder Dave Hopkins, 177-pounder Dave Foster and heavyweight Jerry Fultz.

Volleyball

Coach Nancy Schaub's spikers made it all the way to the Mideast regionals before seeing the season finally come to a close. The appearance in the regionals, where Ohio won one of three games, marked the first time the 'Cats have advanced that far in volleyball. Ohio finished 20-14 overall, including a third-place finish in the state tournament.

Hockey

The Bobcats stood 3-3 entering winter quarter under player-coach Doug Ross, a member of the 1976 U.S. Olympic team who is in his first year coaching Ohio's club-level team.

Swimming

The women swimmers, also under a first-year coach, Brigid DeVries, took a 2-0 dual meet record into winter quarter after defeating Denison and Rio Grande. The team also was second in a triangular with Wooster and Ashland but finished last in the seven-team Bowling Green Relays.

Soccer

Ohio's young team finished 4-10-2, although Coach Earl Draper retained his usual optimism. "Record-wise, it was a disappointing year," he said, "but as a coach, I really enjoyed working with this team."

"This is the first group I recruited and it was an extremely young team. But I can't wait for next season. We have a lot of very talented people coming back, and this team can only get better."

Football

Although the football season ended a few weeks ago, honors are still pouring in for the Bobcats.

Selected to the All-Mid-American Conference first team were junior guard Bob Weidaw, senior linebacker Greg Lockett, junior running back Arnold Welcher and sophomore defensive end Steve Groves.

Second-team picks included senior offensive tackle Tom Kauffman, junior defensive back Lyle Govert and sophomore defensive back Joe Callan.

Lockett, Welcher and Groves were honorable mention All-America selections as chosen by The Associated Press, while junior quarterback Andy Vetter made The Sporting News' honorable mention All-America team.

Vetter also was named the AP's Player of the Week and to the United Press International Backfield of the Week for rushing for four touchdowns and passing for three in Ohio's season-closing 63-15 trouncing of Northern Illinois.

Additionally, Lockett, Kauffman and senior defensive tackle Rod Day played in the All-Ohio Shrine Bowl.

Ohio closed out the year at 7-4 overall and 6-2 in the MAC, tying for second. Ball State was the champion.

Rugby

In rugby, a club sport, Ohio compiled a 2-4 record fall quarter. Senior Dave Lyons was selected to play in the prestigious Lone Star Tournament in Houston.

Alumnae Basketball

An alumnae squad, coached by Keith Welsh, met the OU women's basketball team Jan. 9, going down to defeat 71-40.

Returning for the game were Tammy Adams '73, Peggy Amos '76, Susan Ash '74, Mary Burke '69, Marge Fetrow '75, Teri Fitzgerald '74, Lynn Gatsch '73, Kathy McGirr '73, Sally Mitchell '75, Janeen Sands '74, Sue Wyman Thomas '68, and Debi Childress West '74.

Alumni Aid Deaf Olympics

Christman

Gorrell

McNulty

Wolfert

Four Ohio University graduates will spend a unique summer vacation in 1977. Howard Gorrell '68, Melanie Sarakatsannis McNulty '72, Ed Christman '69, and Ken Wolfert '67 will be in Bucharest, Romania, in July for the XIII World Games for the Deaf.

Gorrell, special assistant to the U.S. World Games for the Deaf Committee, is himself deaf and an athlete. A physical education major at OU, he played lacrosse three years and threw the javelin.

In 1969 he established the American deaf record in the hammer throwing event, and he took fourth place in javelin at the XII World Games in 1973. At the First Pan-American Games in 1975 he won a gold medal in javelin and a silver in shot-put. This summer he will be an alternate for the javelin team.

Mrs. McNulty will be going to the games as assistant coach of the women's track and field team. She is head women's track coach at the Tennessee School for the Deaf in Knoxville, and this year her teams won the National Deaf Prep Championships.

She is "thrilled at the opportunity to go to Romania and to help with the women's team" and proud that four of her own athletes made the team after this summer's try-outs.

Wolfert and Christman will be the two male certified trainers accompanying the U.S. team.

Head trainer at Miami University, Wolfert is volunteering his time to the project and is currently coordinating the effort to get medical supplies. He is not sure yet if his wife, Patricia Donaldson '69, and their two sons will be going to Bucharest.

At the three-week training camp in North Carolina prior to the Games, Wolfert will be reunited with Christman, who served under him as assistant trainer at Miami before becoming head trainer at the College of William and Mary.

Christman is also engaged in the effort to get supplies donated and to help athletes raise funds. The Games receive no government funding, and each team member is responsible for getting the $2,500 it will take to allow him or her to participate.

Gorrell noted that, through unfamiliarity alone, the two trainers "may experience some nervousness when they enter the different world — the deaf one," but he believes that working for a special Olympic affair should also be "a great experience" for them as well as for himself and Mrs. McNulty.
